The original plastic rug, made with love and pride in Sweden

Welcome to the world of Pappelina

Welcome to the world of Pappelina, where design innovation meets the beauty of Swedish craftsmanship. It all began as a coincidence in 1999 when Lina Rickardsson, the visionary founder and designer of Pappelina, searched for a weaving mill capable of bringing her hand-woven linen rugs to life. In the heart of Sweden, a small mill answered her call, though with an unexpected twist - they wove with plastic, not linen. Lina's creative mind immediately began to envision a new direction, one that ventured beyond traditional rug materials. What started with classic stripes soon evolved into more graphical patterns and jacquard looms. Challenging the conventions of Scandinavian rug-making, Pappelina introduced a novel concept, both in terms of materials and techniques. With that, a versatile and innovative product was born - the original plastic rug, crafted with love and pride in Sweden by Pappelina. From these humble beginnings, Pappelina's story took off, eventually spreading its influence to over 45 countries. As we introduce our SS24 collection, "The Elements Collection," we warmly invite you to delve into Pappelina's rich heritage and experience the timeless beauty of our exceptional design and craftsmanship.

The Elements Collection

SPRING / SUMMER 2024

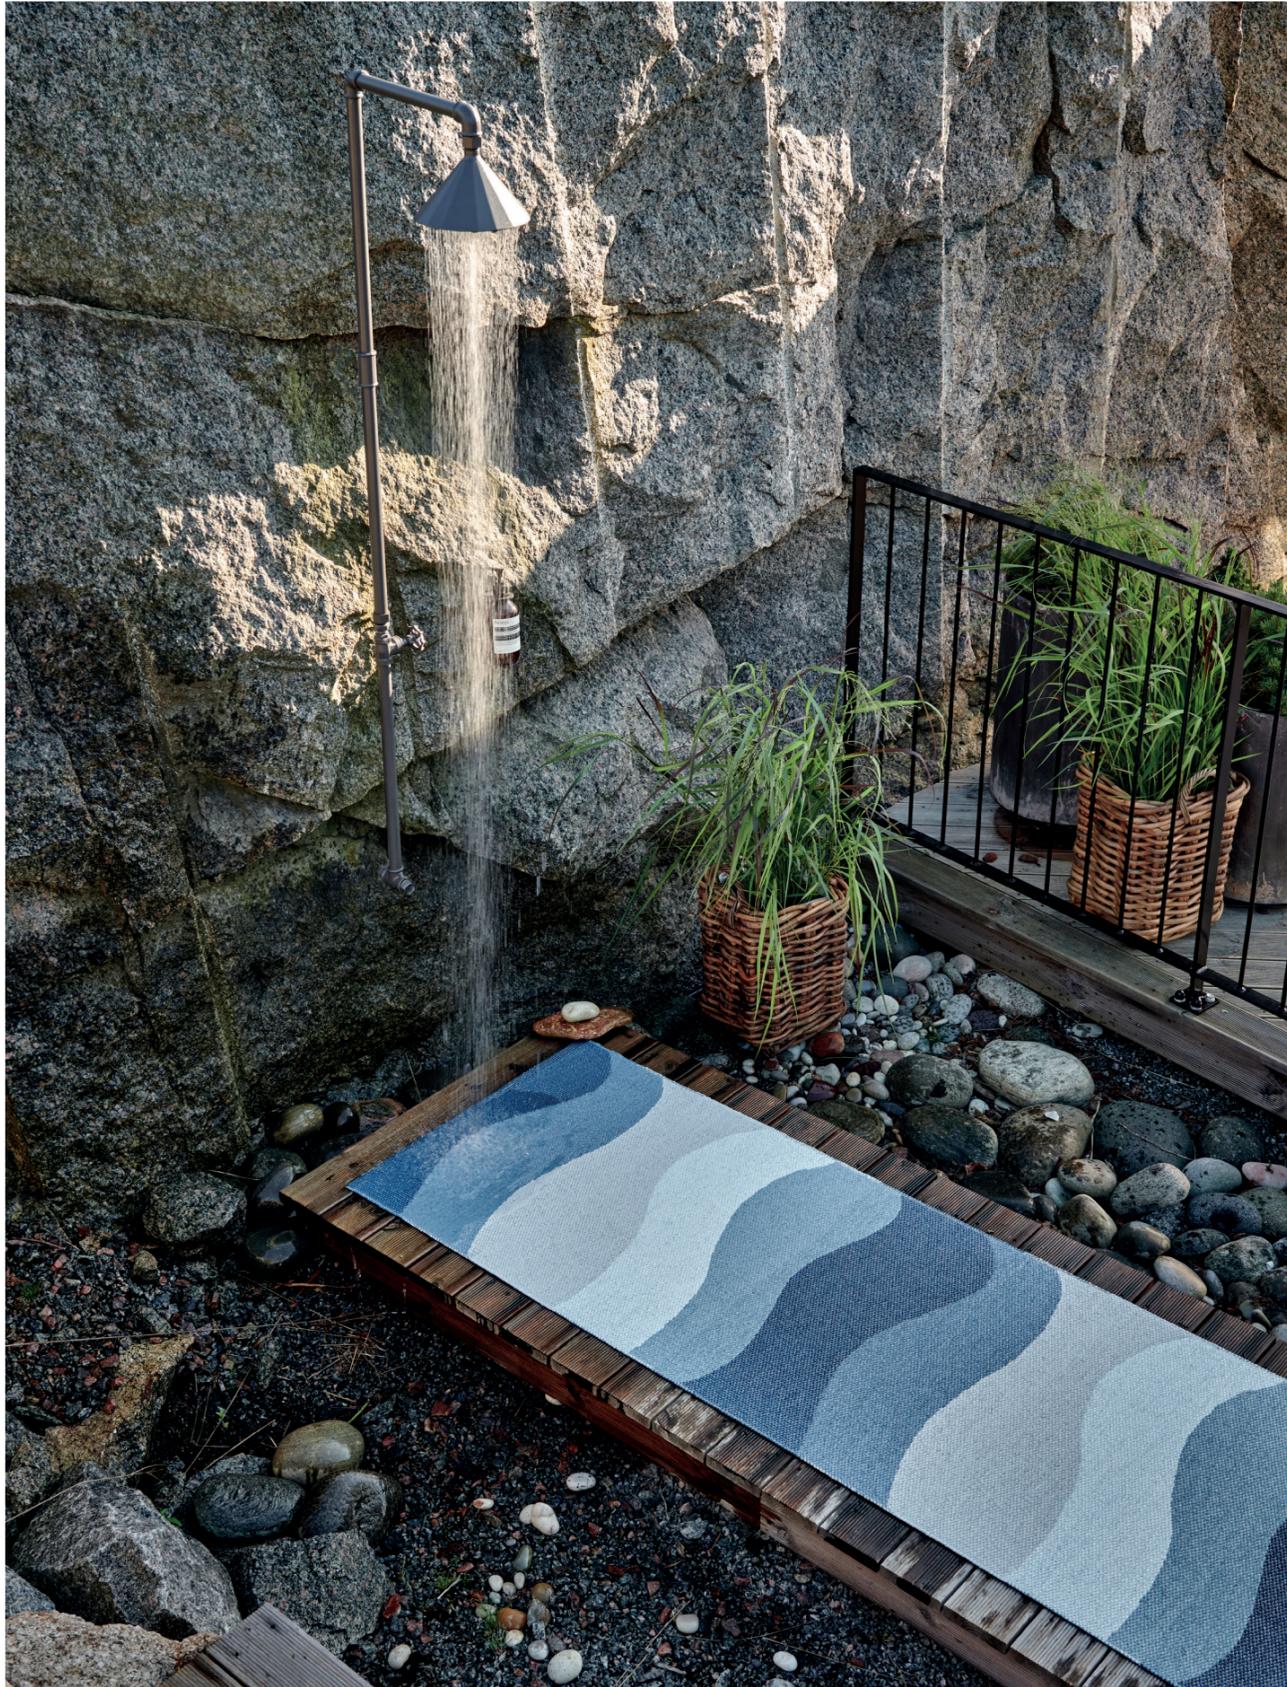

The Elements Collection - a dynamic and vibrant ensemble that pulsates with fresh energy. The collection stands for the urge to explore new shapes and pushing the boundaries of design. Our designer has artfully balanced a spectrum of lively colors and forms to create the perfect combination that represent the spirit of the five elements in a unique Pappelina style. Each piece is carefully crafted to capture the essence of Wood, Fire, Earth, Metal, and Water, resulting in a seamless fusion of energy, style and shades.

"It's about how the eye perceives different shifts, like changes in the ocean, which are never static. There's a constant movement within the elements. My goal was to capture the feeling when the eye gets to rest, when your imagination starts to wander while gazing at the colorful life of an element."

Lina Rickardsson,
Creative Director & Founder of Pappelina

URVI | Water

URVI

The heartbeat of the Elements Collection. A design inspired by the ocean and the movement of its waves. The idea stemmed from creating a pattern with features and motions mirroring the dynamic energy of water.

The concept of our environment's core extended to the pattern's next phase, resulting in the creation of five distinct rugs. Each elegantly symbolizing the diversity of materials found on Earth's surface, the so called five elements.

URVI is a repeating pattern featuring expansive color fields in each color. The tone-by-tone colors within this design symbolize the core attributes of each element, creating a harmonious interplay of nature's diversity. Named URVI, meaning EARTH, it embodies the captivating spirit of this pattern—a seamless blend of vibrant colors reflecting the power of Mother Earth.

NEW COLORS

Since the very beginning of Pappelina, the launch of a new color, design, or collection has always been made with the aim of longevity. We stand by the concept of “slow interior design”, seamlessly harmonizing with contemporary trends while remaining timeless. It’s this guiding principle that motivates us to breathe new life into our classic designs with fresh color palettes.

HUGO

Dots and stripes are cornerstones in the Pappelina design library, and HUGO is no exception. With its palette of tone-on-tone colors, HUGO has undergone a contemporary update, now featuring solid, matte colors that harmonize seamlessly with the elements of the new collection. Each Pappelina design is given a simple yet meaningful name, and the name 'HUGO' perfectly captures the masculine undertones that resonate within its design.

BIO EDITION

A fusion between design and sustainability.

Sustainability has remained our primary focus throughout our journey and in every decision we make. As being the original entails being the pioneer in something, we introduced the first BIO EDITION in 2022. This was a substantial step towards carbon neutrality for Pappelina, focusing on circularity. Our BIO EDITION is the first woven rug made of BIOVYN™ - a bio-sourced, carbon neutral PVC that originates from tall oil* – made by nature.

So, does this mean that all the other Pappelina rugs made of conventional PVC are less sustainable? No, conventional PVC already has a very low carbon footprint and is a long-lasting material, made to be used for many years to come. A Pappelina rug is always a good responsible choice.

POPPY & VERA 2.0 - A Sustainable Duo

Our BIO EDITION consists of two very classic Pappelina looks, VERA 2.0 and POPPY. Designs that have the characteristic Pappelina spirit and energy. VERA 2.0 with its large round, circles, and POPPY with its graphic design, both with a repetitive pattern, giving them attributes that showcase our designer's creative mind. Our designer, Lina Rickardsson, finds constant inspiration in patterns and discovers endless possibilities in her surroundings in Dalarna, Sweden. Making each design characterized by its simplicity, functionality, and connection to nature.

Tall oil is a residue oil extracted mainly from pine trees in softwood pulping process used for paper production, and a part of responsible wood sourcing.*

FROM IMAGINATION TO PERFECTION

CRAFTING A RUG

A rug begins its life in the mind of Lina Rickardsson. When her idea for a design is realized, the pattern is transferred to a computer file, then sent to an expert who uses a special digital weaving programme. Now it's about the fine details. Skilled eyes determine exactly which thread in the warp should be raised and exactly when, so that the loom can recreate Lina's pattern. The information is entered into the weaving programme, which creates a long punch-card strip to guide the loom.

Nils Björklund set up the weaving mill in 1948, his son Lars then brought the legacy to contemporary days. Now his grandson Kim Frøyen has learnt the craftsmanship. For a visitor, it's like stepping into a museum: a large number of looms, some from the fifties, some the sixties. Large and loud in cast iron. The reason for this sense of antiquity is quite simply that such looms are no longer produced. "Look after them and they'll last forever," says weaving master Kim. "We're the ones affected if the product isn't good." But the product is good – in fact, it's really good. "We have to be the best," says Kim. "And we are. I can make that claim without hesitation."

To begin with, the 600-metre-long thread must be warped onto the loom. Next, each individual thread must be inserted the right way. All of this is done by hand. Especially important is the setting of the weights that ensures the straight edges of the rug. As always, it's about the detail.

"Hands, eyes and skill - every detail must be perfect". That is the truth about the plastic material, which is delivered from Gislaved Folie in the south of Sweden, where it is dyed, milled and cut to the right width. On arrival in Dalarna, it is heated and coiled into a spool. Once more it's about precision. It can be neither too stiff nor too soft. "If it's not correct, then the rug is discarded," says the weaving master Kim. An incorrect margin of one-tenth of a millimetre can ruin everything. Naturally, this can and does occasionally happen, the result being a defective rug. But here weaving master Kim is quick to point out that such a rug never leaves the mill. For him, it's a case of professional pride – and survival. It's a true piece of craftsmanship. It's quality. And it's Swedish through and through.
